The Pamir Plateau

This land was once an ocean

280 million years ago, this region was a vast, surging ocean spanning the southern Eurasian continent of the 21st century, known as the "Paleo-Tethys Ocean."

The Pamir Plateau, located at the center of Asia and on China's western border, is a grand convergence of towering mountain ranges and vast alpine lakes. Some of the Earth's most famous mountain chains meet here, tying the planet together like a powerful knot.
